Steve,

I do not want to delay the phone recovery and search of your client's cloud.
Please let me know if we can make arrangements to have the phones shipped to the experts and get the log in information for the cloud to them as well.

She has the ability to get it in the way that Mr. Dinsmore explained and she has the obligation to do so.

As I remember she told Dinsmore that she did not write it down as it was in her phone and thought she could get it there.

Damon provided Mr. Dinsmore his cloud login credentials and Mr. Dinsmore verified that the login credentials were accurate. As for Damon's cloud information, we are all set.

As for Lori's cloud login credentials, you are correct. Mr. Dinsmore informed me that they were unsuccessful in retrieving Plaintiff's cloud information when they attempted to reset it from Damon's e-mail. Has Lori been able to remember her password? Does she have it written down anywhere? Has she tried calling Google to reset her password?

As I understand it they did do a new password when they were here with the expert and sent it to Damon's email and it still would not allow it to go to the cloud because it had to go to a working o=phone. I will check but I am not sure what you mean by the password. You may want to clarify that with him. If it is the one they used at the end of the meeting then I think it is still good and hasn't been changed but will check. If there is a new one that they will be getting I will tell them to save it. Do you need the phone then?

PS. By the way, please remind your client that the password info for the cloud is still needed when she gets it. My understanding is that she and or her husband will be getting an email from Google to reset it.

What is required? It sounds like you need the phone, which may not be a problem since it is not working and we will have to get it to you? What does it mean that data may be lost? There is data on the chip that I think you did retrieve and it sounds like there a chance that the data on the chip will be lost with this process and if so can your guy get their data back to them since he copied the chip?

Steve,

Please see the information obtained from N1D below. I would like to have them try to recover the data. It would be less costly to have them do it at their facility. Please let me know your thoughts.

Laura & Melanie,

I just wanted to follow up and convey the response we received from Cellebrite Advanced Services regarding the phone recovery. They are unable to assist in recovering the phone from the "boot loop", and would need it in a functioning state in order to forensically collect it (much like N1D). As discussed, N1D could attempt to recover the phone from the "boot loop", understanding that we cannot guarantee it would be successful, and that there is a chance for data loss.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Cary Wilson
